

Lincolnshire Buff Poultry Society

Please send this application form to:

Jeannie Winter
Winters Farm
Marsh Lane, off Skitter Rd
East Halton
Immingham
Lincolnshire
DN40 3PX

Date Received:

The Lincolnshire Buff Poultry Society welcomes new members and would particularly like to encourage serious breeders who could help to increase the number of quality birds in circulation.

We would however welcome all who are interested in the breed, whether you require a smallholder's fowl, show birds or just wish to support the society.

As a member you will receive 3 newsletters per year containing articles, colour photographs and information on events and shows. Our Club show is held at The East of England Show at Horncastle each November. We hold Regional Shows at The Federation Show at Stafford, the Poultry Club of Great Britain Show, Telford, Shropshire and also East of England Spring Show, Horncastle.

The AGM is at a suitable Lincolnshire Pub in September/October where a regular workshop takes place to help Members to improve their breeding stock.

The Membership Secretary:
Jeannie Winter Winters Farm, Marsh Lane,
off Skitter Road, East Halton, Immingham Nth
Lincolnshire DN40 3PX
07876076882
jawinter64@btinternet.com
www.lincolnshirebuff.co.uk

The Lincolnshire Buff was a dual purpose utility breed found mainly in its native Lincolnshire. During the 19th and early 20th Century, it was supplied in vast numbers to the London markets as a white fleshed table bird and was widely sold as a good winter layer. Standardisation of the Buff Orpington, which many at the time considered to be a refined Lincolnshire Buff, led to its demise in many by the 1920's, although its genetic material lived on in the Orpington albeit in a much modified form.

In the 1980's the breed was re-developed in Lincolnshire using this genetic material, with the addition of the Cochin and Dorking. This in turn produced an ideal fowl for the modern smallholder.

Lincolnshire is probably unique among the English Counties in so much as it had four distinct breeds of livestock which originated within the County boundaries. We still have Lincoln Longwool sheep and Lincoln Red cattle but sadly the Lincolnshire Buff chicken had faded away by the 1920's. As recently as 1972 the Lincolnshire Curly Coat pig was declared extinct.

It is thought that the Lincolnshire Buff appeared in the 1850's, not long after the introduction of the Asiatic breeds such as the Shanghai, Cochin and Brahma. These new massive fowl were crossed with the old faithful local fowl in many districts to improve size, vigour and egg colour.

The Buff Cochin of the time bore no resemblance to that of the present day, being only slightly feathered on the legs, rather tall and with a distinct colour pattern including chestnut shoulders and black pigment in the tail. This bird was apparently combined with the Dorking and the inevitable "common fowl of the countryside" to produce the prototype Lincolnshire fowl which had legs and feet which were either white or yellow and sometimes feathered.

When William Cook's Buff Orpington was introduced in 1894, there was much argument among the poultry experts of the time, many of whom were convinced that it was merely a selected Lincolnshire Buff with four toes and clean legs. Harrison Weir, a famous poultry illustrator and writer wrote extensively about this controversy in his 1902 book, "Our Poultry". He was of the opinion that Cook's original confection would never breed true because of its constituents. The Lincolnshire Buff was thought to be easier to stabilise and probably took over Cook's original genetic material by sheer weight of numbers.

The breed was however eventually standardised as the Orpington and the Lincolnshire name faded away by the 1920's to re-appear in the 1980's. After much work to re-create the breed by a Lincolnshire Agricultural College and local breeders, it was granted a Standard by the Poultry Club of Great Britain in 1997, nearly 150 years after its original creation.

Application Form for Lincolnshire Buff Poultry Society

Name -----

Address -----

Postcode-----

Telephone -----

Email-----

SUBSCRIPTIONS:

Ordinary membership £7, Under 16's £4.50 and Friend of the LBPS £25. Subscriptions to be renewed 1st September annually. Cheques made payable to "Lincolnshire Buff Poultry Society".

I enclose a subscription of £ -----
And agree to abide by the rules of the constitution.

Signed -----

Do you keep any Lincolnshire Buffs at present Yes No
If Yes, how many? Males____ Females____

Would you like to have a 'wanted' advert placed in the next newsletter/website? (free to use) Yes No
If yes, please give the Secretary details of your requirements e.g. breeding birds, hatching eggs, quantities and contact details etc...

How did you hear about LBPS -----
